Franckiewicz Jr. has been elected the new state senator for District 46.

At a victory party Tuesday night, Franckiewicz said he already has several things has wants to work on when he goes to Jackson to succeed Gene Taylor, who resignesd last month after winning the Fifth District congressional seat.

"The BEST program is definitely at the top of the agenda." said the new senator. BEST is one of Governor Ray Mabus' current educational reform He is also advocating reforms of the state constitution, which he said "can only be accomplished through a constitutional convention. Franckiewicz also has a couple of long-term goals in mind. "State government reorganization is still important, but I don't know if it will be a hot issue this year. We really won't we have straightened out our problems with the constitution," he said.

"Also, over the long term, we have to look at the overall tax structure of the state. It's a $4.5 billion operation right now and the tax structure that supports it is a crazy quilt of all kinds of taxes and all kinds of exemptions just pasted together over the decades.

"We can to a better job funding the state and do it with fair taxation.

"I'm excited to be a representative of the people," combe able to do it effectively until mented Franckiewicz, who is now attending law school in New Orleans after having FRANCKIEWICZ-3A

Johnson utilities cases to be reassessed Dec. 7

BY DENA BISNETTE

Johnson Utilities customers in the coastal counties may get some relief from their water problems as a result of a Dec. 7 meeting of the State Health Department.

Stephanie Ganucheau, an assistant state attorney general who represents the health department, said the Dec. 7 meeting will be used to discuss proposed improvements to two of Johnson's seven utility systems, the Clermont Harbor Water Works and Pass Christian Isles Water Company.

Ganucheau said Glen Kelly Johnson, owner of Johnson

Utilities, faces contempt of court charges and heavy fines if the proposals are not acceptable.

She explained that about eight suits were settled against Johnson several years ago and that four of them, including the Pass Christian Isles case and three involving systems in Jackson County, have been reactivated by the attorney general's office.

Johnson had been ordered to upgrade the systems but has yet to do so and, as a result, faces the contempt charges. Ganucheau said the attorney general's office has been negotiating with his attorneys and those charges could be dropped if a suitable agreement can be reached.

She said the Clermont Harbor case will be considered after the results of the Dec. 7 meeting are known, and if Johnson does not take actual steps toward repairing the four systems to be discussed at that time, the attorney general's office will file contempt charges in the Clermont Harbor matter.

The action by the health department and the attorney general's office may not solve all of the problems Johnson Utili-UTILITIES—PAGE 12-A

The Bay St. Louis City Council passed a resolution Tuesday evening to request further input from Mississippi's Washington delegation and NASA on the Advanced Solid Rocket Motor (ASRM) tests proposed for Stennis Space

"It is time that this council take a stand on this issue. I think the people of this community need to know the truth about these tests," Councilmanresolution.

The Hancock County Board of Supervisors and the Waveland Board of Aldermen recently passed similar resolutions.

The motion came after a presentation by Dr. Robert Esher, an environmental scientist with Mississippi State University and spokesman for the Waveland-based group Citizens for a Healthy Environment. Esher addressed the council

"Personally, I am dead set against the (solid rockets) because of the safety factor. but I don't want this council to commit themselves until we have all the facts," Council President John Wilkerson said.

Solid rockets are more dangerous than liquid-fueled rockets because they cannot be turned off or throttled up or down once ignited, according to

Councilman James Thriffiley III suggested the council should ask that the information they are requesting, because of its technical nature, be provided in a simplified form that can be understood by the average

In his presentation, Esher outlined health and environmental hazards CHE feels will be caused by the pollutants produced by the tests.

Each two-minute test will emit approximately 250,000 pounds of hydrogen chloride gas and 350,000 pounds of aluminum oxide into the atmosphere. Both compounds are hazardous substances.

The scientist gave the council copies of a study done for NASA in Florida in the mid-1970s showing the combination of acid and aluminum oxide in solid rocket exhaust is more deadly than either compound alone.

NASA maintains that the pollution associated with the tests will disperse over a wide area and will not cause significant damage.

Because, according to NASA documents, solid rocket exhaust destroys the ozone layer, the use of solid fuels is more than a local issue, Esher said.

Ozone is a compound found in the atmosphere that filters ultraviolet radiation from Depletion of the earth's ozone layer has been credited with the global warming trend known as the "Greenhouse Effect" and an increased incidence of skin cancer.

Rutherford's motion passed unanimously, with all five council members present.

Wilkerson then asked the Mississippi Mammas, a musical duo in attendance, to introduce themselves.

The "Mammas", Dodie Droddy and Karen Long, have written and recorded a song about the ASRM issue, Solid Rocket Fuel, which proposes "You have liquid fuel, use it".

"Those are my sentiments exactly, You've got liquid fuel use it,' Wilkerson said, after a tape of the song was played for the council.

When I read the article on the that the school was definitely not filled with smoke from that locker. In fact, as soon as I saw that Mr. Powell had the situation under control, I settled my students down, and we got back to work.

My room is one of the closest to the locker, and we were not at all bothered by smoke. The only thing my students complained about was the smell of the burned paper; therefore, I find

Former Dye supporter Harper criticizes his power, expenses the rules intend."

It wasn't smart of Lieut. Gov. Brad Dye to make Sen. Ken Harper of Vicksburg mad.

Now the 50-year-old Vicksburg attorney has become a tough new critic of Dye over the lieutenant governor's high-flying use of state-owned aircraft and coziness with legislative lobbyists.

Harper, formerly a Dye backer, has gone digging into flight logs of state aircraft since 1980 when Dye took office and come up with what he says are at least 15 trips in which Dye took registered lobbyists with him, several to out-of-state football and basketball games.

Harper has also asked Attv. Gen. Mike Moore to determine the legality of the Senate Contingent Expense Committee giving Dye power to individually approve travel expenses for members of the Senate to attend out-of-state meetings and conferences.

"Brad Dye's rule now over the Senate is much more autocratic than (former House Speaker) Buddie Newman's ever was in the House," Harper declared.

Harper had not been one of the seven senators who in 1988 proposed changes in Senate rules to strip Dye of powers to appoint Senate committees, assign bills to committees and serve on the Senate Rules and Contingent Expense fund committees.

The split between Harper and Dye stems from the move made by Dye in August in appointing former lobbyist Frank Barber as secretary of the Senate after polling senators by telephone.

Harper had contended that it was not legal for Dye to select the Senate secretary by polling members, that it could only be done by the Senate in official

Voice of freedom heard in Poland's Walesa

Only two other foreign nonheads-of-state had ever addressed a joint-session of the United States Congress. Last week, Poland's Lech Walesa, an electrician from a shipyard in Gdansk, became the third. As the son of a shipyard pipefitter, I was truly moved by his words.

Walesa, the leader of Poland's Solidarity movement, brought with him a proposal; an offer to which every American could relate.

"We would like cooperation under decent and favorable conditions," he said. "We would like Americans to come to us with proposals of cooperation bringing benefits to both sides."

I found that particular statement refreshing. Too often, foreigners knock on our door for purely selfish reasons.

He pointed out that "Americans are known to be energetic and practical businessmen and since we (Poland) want to introduce a free market and free competition to our country. Americans should show an interest, for it is on this that their prosperity is based. "This," he said, "is precisely what we are counting on."

His speech was to the point, sincere and at times humorous. But the message this leader of democracy in the East brought with him was very serious.

He began with "We the people..." and ended with a prediction. "The wall that was separating people from freedom (The Berlin Wall) has collapsed," he said. "The nations of the world will never let it be rebuilt." A bold statement from a bold

Walesa talked about the movement he is leading referring to it as "effective." "It speeded the march towards freedom and democracy, a march that is now being joined. by swelling throngs of people speaking various languages,"he said. "It has opened up entirely new horizons."

He spoke of a difficult. struggle, but a peaceful one. No violence, but plenty of suffering. And he spoke of a stubborness that allowed the collective call for freedom and pluralism to be heard above those who attempted to squelch it. He talked about his country's past. "In the Second World War, Poland was the first country to fall victim of aggression," he pointed out. "Her losses in terms of human life and national property were the heaviest. Her fight was the longest." And afterwards, an alien system of government was imposed, unaccepted by the nation.

But he also addressed the present. "Things are different," ĥe said. "Poland is making an important contribution to a better future for Europe, to a European reconciliation to overcoming of old divisions and to strengthening of human rights on our continent.'

The thanked Congress and the American people for its money and support, but made it clear, he was seeking a partnership of mutual interest, not a hand-out. "We are not asking for charity, or expecting philanthropy," he said. "But we would like to see 'our country treated...as a friend." Finally, Wales compared his country to our own. "I wish all of you to know and to keep in mind that the ideals which underlie this glorious American republic and which are still alive here. are also living in faraway Poland," he said. And although for many long years efforts were made to cut her offfrem these ideals, Poland held her ground and is now reaching for the freedom to which she is justly entitled."

Walesa took home more than support. Packed in his suitcase, was the respect and hearts of the American people.

In a world with few real heroes, Poland's Lech Walesa has shown us that they do still exist. And most dramatically, that anyone, even a shipyard electrician, can be come one.

The traditional American holiday of Thanksgiving Day is a time not only for feasting, of course, but also for giving thanks for our shared traditions and our blessings throughout

And, so it has been ever since that first Thanksgiving Day when the Pilgrims and the Indians shared a meal and gave thanks for the harvest.

And, ever since that first Thanksgiving, the turkey has been a symbol of Thanksgiving Dinner to many of us. Native wild turkey, at one time so plentiful, was probably served at the first Thanksgiving feast along with venison and small game.

Through the years, although many diners still prefer turkey. baked ham has come into favor as the piece de resistance of the Thanksgiving table also, or a pork roast or roast goose or whatever—the celebration is the same in essence, whatever is served, isn't it?

And, of course, when all the feasting is over, we try to think of tasty dishes from the leftover-whatever, for the family which sat down so happily to Thanksgiving Dinner is wont to turn up the nose, so to speak, after a day or so of leftover

One of the easiest ways to use leftovers, and quite a tasty one as well, is:

Reflections

On Life

By Father Jerome Ledoux, SVD

"O Mary, my Queen and my Mother. I give myself entirely to you. And to show my devotion to you, I consecrate to you this day my eyes, my ears, my mouth, my heart and my whole being without reserve. Wherefore, since I am yours, o living Mother, keep me and guard me as your property and possession."

The young Baptist lady looked up from the catechism from which she was reading, curled her lips in outrage and

'That's blasphemy! We cannot consecrate ourselves to anyone but God! When I read that, that did it for me!"

Without being certain whither the Spirit was calling her, yet feeling an attraction to the Catholic faith, she had begun to attend an occasional Mass, had spoken with a nearby parish priest, and had waded with many doubts into a catechism.

I had explained to her that Catholics do not worship Mary or the saints, and that "praying to" the saints is no more than a way of saying that we ask the saints to pray for us, since there is nothing which they can do for us but through God.

parallel is that we ask one another on earth to pray for us and for our intentions.

Interestingly, she found no problem at all in this explanation. It was obviously not her religious prejudices or lack of good will which got in the way of her acceptance of the abovequoted consecration to Mary. It had to be something in the wording. The more I thought about it, the more I came to realize just how easily the young lady or any non-Catholic could be confused by the terms we use to describe our veneration of and devotion to Mary and the rest of the saints.

Even "veneration" can be misunderstood, since it also means "worship"—something which is due to God alone. Likewise, the term "devotion" can be misleading, since the literal meaning of devotion is to appropriate oneself by vow, to dedicate oneself by a solemn act, to consecrate oneself. And, of course, we make vows to God

We compound the potential for confusion even more by using the term "cult of the saints." "Cult," of course, imme-Of course, the most striking diately conjures up visions of groups which do not portray the balanced wisdom, fervor and universal people-love of Jesus Christ. That stands to reason because cults reject Jesus.

No wonder, then, that the very word "cult" is abhorred by Christians of every stripe, and justly so. Yet, we have clung to ambiguous words like this until very recent times, and we still find it in the Catholic Almanac and many other Catholic books.

One of the shockers for the young Baptist lady was the incredible extent and depth of the ignorance of most Catholics. After all, she had been studying the Catholic faith just a few short weeks; yet, she seemed to know more about Catholicism various extremist, fanatical than most Catholics. None of the Catholics whom she met could answer some relatively simple questions about Mary and the saints.

It seems convenient to have technical theological terms which put all doctrines into neat little pigeon holes. However, the convenient little terms have served to confuse most of our Catholics for centuries, and things are not getting better.

The hour is not too late for us to start calling the baby by its name: that is, a name which everyone can easily understand. We can do without most of the technical terms which confuse almost everyone. We worship God alone. In God's name, we honor the saints.

Immediately she was in contact with the police who kept her on the telephone until an officer could arrive at her house and search for the would-be intruder. 911, a great innovation!

A great source of comfort and reassurance! A great means of protecting property and saving lives! 911: a number to call during a crisis.

I was just wondering how many people are using God as their own 911 crisis number? For days, and sometimes weeks on end they have no communication with God, not even a thought about him. Then it strikes: Tragedy!

Oh, it may be spelled as sickness, death, loss of job or any of a number of ways, but it still ends up the same—tragedy with a capital "T." Immediately the call is made—not 911, but "Dear God, save me! Help me!

Heal me!" The frantic cries for help arise from lips unaccustomed to speaking His name. To many, this privilege of prayer is just Now surely God wants us to That should be obvious. His word declares: "Call on Me in the day of trouble: I shall rescue" you, and you will honor Me." (Psalm 50:15).

But He does not want us to turn to Him only in times of trouble. In the days of old, Israel thought that it could live as sinful as it pleased, and then when calamity came, call out for the Lord's help. Israel was wrong!

In Micah 3:1-4, Zachariah 7:8-14, Malachi 1:6-14, are found some of the reasons why they were wrong in thinking this way. In part we find that Israel would not listen to God and in return God would not listen to them. Thus, they were carried off into captivity. Isaiah 59:1-2 tells us that it is sin that separates man from the blessings of a caring God.

If we are going to call on God for help during times of crisis, we must have a good relationship with Him at other times. We must strive for a full-time, close relationship with our heavenly Father.

Haas expects restitution will be paid by the child as a result of his own efforts and earnings within a one-year period, However, under the provi-sion of a state law which went into effect July 1, 1989, the court has authority to order parents of a child causing willful damages or injury to pay for such to the extent of the loss. In other words, it is a parental responsibility under the law to be personally liable for such damages caused by their children.

The restitution ordered by the Youth Court shall not preclude recovery of damages by the victim for the child or parent, guardian or custodian. or any other person who may be liable.

During the month of October. Youth Court has returned restitution to victims in the amount of $816; in fines, the Youth Court has collected $216. Since the beginning of 1989, the amount of restitution paid to victims is $4,908. In fines, the county has gained $2,360 to be used toward the cost of operations of the Hancock County Youth Court.

Haas feels that ordering the children to pay restitutions or fines, serves multiple purposes; The children will benefit from the lesson of responsibility and punishment learned from this experience; The county will benefit monetarily by the fines collected; The children learning discipline and responsibility will hopefully decrease delin-quency; And the victims of crime will be reimbursed for at least part of their loss and

TIME OUT

By Dena Bisnette

Champion Senior Tigers

Due to the Thanksgiving holiday, there are not a whole lot of sporting events scheduled this weekend.

However, sports has always been a large part of Thanksgiving for me. The reason I haven't got the foggiest notion how long a turkey should be cooked is probably football. (Timing a turkey by quarters instead of minutes will result in an undercooked bird if the game is good and a burnt fowl if a lot of time outs are involved.

Without local football, people seem more inclined to turn to the television version of the game and check out the pro

Another sport connected with Thanksgiving is hunting. Thank God we don't have to hunt our own turkeys to be able to have a holiday meal, but hunters still like going out on Thanksgiving. After all, it's an extra day off during deer season, and if you're lucky enough to have a place to hunt that's near home and someone willing to stay home to cook, you're assured of a good meal when you get home from the Hancock County's own Brett Favre has broken another University of Southern Mississippi record, being responsible for 43 touchdowns in three years as a Golden Eagle. The record he broke was established from 1979 to 1982 by another former coast resident, Reggie Collier of Biloxi. During Saturday's season closer against East Carolina, Favre is going to get a shot at Collier's career offensive yardage record, which is 5,966. Good luck, Brett.

what changes are needed to secure healthy growth of the redfish population.

Recreational redfishing is not affected by this closure, Gordon said.
